HUMBERSIDE

1. Introduction

1.1 When providing care and support or acting to safeguarding adults there is a balance to be struck between care and treatment being provided and an adult's right to self-determination. This guidance provides a pathway for dealing with adults who may be vulnerable and for whom hoarding becomes an issue that needs to be addressed in the same way as other forms of 'self-neglect'.

1.2 Adults sometimes make decisions and lifestyle choices that others may perceive to be either unwise or not in their best interest, but adults still have the right to live as they choose without undue or disproportionate interference. On occasions however, external intervention is both legitimate and necessary to address the safety and wellbeing of them or others, including adults who lack the mental capacity to make their own best interest decisions.

1.3 This guidance aims to provide information on managing harm around hoarding issues only. Further information on other aspects of self-neglect can be found in Chapter 14 of Care Act guidance and through further reading as recommended at the end of this document.

2. Care Act and Self-Neglect through Hoarding

2.1 The Care Act and requirements within safeguarding processes for Making Safeguarding Personal prescribe some six guiding principles that should be applied when considering whether to act on concerns around hoarding where it constitutes self-neglect:

- i. Empowerment: Starting from the assumption that individuals are best placed to judge their own wellbeing and giving consideration to the individual's view, wishes, feelings and belief
- ii. Prevention: Working to protect people from abuse and neglect and prevent escalation of risk by providing support that reduces the need for intervention
- iii. Proportionality: Working in the least intrusive way so that any restrictions placed on an individual's rights or freedom or any action taken that is against a person's will is kept to a minimum
- iv. Protection: Working to protect individuals from abuse and the impact and harm of neglect
- v. Partnership: Maximising the active participation of individuals in need, offering individual choice wherever possible and working with partner agencies to achieve the best outcomes
- vi. Accountability: Making sure that individuals are aware of what we are doing, who they are working with and what our responsibilities are

2.2 Defining Hoarding as Self-Neglect: The Department of Health defines self-neglect as "... a wide range of behaviours neglecting to care for one's personal hygiene, health or surroundings, including behaviour such as hoarding" (2014)

2.3 Unlike other sources of harm, hoarding is a behavior that can cause harm but has no 'perpetrator'. Abuse or harm by others cannot be excluded however as a possible cause of someone beginning to 'self-neglect', hence the Care Act 2014 and the Care Act guidance requires that we have measures in place to address the causes and impact of self-neglect through hoarding.

2.4 Hoarding can be defined as collecting and failing to discard excessive quantities of goods or objects. Hoarding is not uncommon and in most cases, not indicative of psychiatric illness. It can however become so severe as to cause psychological distress, physical impairment and a risk to health and safety. Hoarding is often covert and may affect only the individual hoarder. Excessive hoarding however, can concern others, particularly when health & safety is compromised - either because of the nature of materials hoarded or the hoarded materials 'spilling over', sometimes affecting the wider environment or becoming a fire risk.

2.5 The reasons for hoarding as self-neglect are not fully understood but may be symptomatic of other underlying conditions. For example, adults with mobility problems may be physically unable to clear large amounts of clutter or may start 'hoarding' by leaving items close and within easy reach. People with learning disabilities or dementia may struggle to categorise or know how or when to dispose of things and may unwittingly acquire duplicate items they already have.

2.6 Mental health problems associated with hoarding include:

- Depression
- Psychotic disorders, such as schizophrenia
- Obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD)

In some cases, hoarding is a condition in itself and often associated with self-neglect.

3. Principles of Practice

3.1 The following principles should underpin practice when addressing hoarding as self-neglect:

- i. Adults have a right to make lifestyle choices that to others can defy common sense; so decisions and actions to intervene must always be justifiable, proportionate and reasonable
- ii. A measured partnership approach is always be preferable so that the skills, powers and resources of difference organisations can be utilized, shared and have optimum impact although emergency responses will still require immediate contact with fire, police or ambulance service
- iii. Multi-agency meetings/panels to address concerns and include the adult at risk should be a starting point. Organisations need to take on roles to support adults at risk from self-neglect
- iv. Doing nothing or closing cases before action has been taken to reduce risk to an acceptable level and minimize harm and/or the likelihood of repeat occurrences is not an option; to do so places adults at increased risk of harm and professionals will have failed in their duties to assist adults to live independently, to safeguard adults and prevent harm.

4. Mental Capacity

4.1 Unless it is known otherwise, all adults are presumed to have capacity. Even with capacity however, some adults still lack understanding or insight into how their actions or omissions impact on themselves or others. When an adult's behaviours raise doubt about their capacity, an assessment compliant with the Mental Capacity Act (MCA 2005) must be conducted. If it is then found that an adult lacks capacity, any action taken by others must be in the person's best interests and take account of the adult's wishes and feelings.

'Self-Neglect and Adult Safeguarding: Findings from Research' (Braye et al., 2011) notes the negative impact of Mental Capacity on perception of risk and action as the ability to process information and understand consequences of decisions becomes impaired. In self-neglect, where capacity for decision making is lacking, intervention should aim at reduction of risk via a Best Interest Decision.

4.2 Capacity assessments undertaken for hoarding behaviors must be time-specific relevant to the planned interventions or action. Assessments should be timely, accurately recorded and best interest decisions made formally with the relevant professionals and relevant adults who have an interest in the person's welfare. The MCA provides a lawful framework in which to eliminate risk, provided that actions taken do not deprive a person of his or her liberty.

4.3 In complex cases, referrals can be made to the Court of Protection to authorise best interest decisions. Referrals to the Court of Protection must be in consultation with safeguarding services, legal advice and the MCA lead for [the relevant LA]'as appropriate.

5. Responses to concerns about Self Neglect and Hoarding

5.1 Most cases of self-neglect through hoarding will be dealt with either by the relevant single agency or via a multi-agency support plan. Where single agencies or non-statutory agencies providing services suspect there is a critical safeguarding issue, a referral should be made to the local safeguarding team for assessment to ensure both risk and wellbeing are addressed.

Engaging the adult at risk

5.2 Regardless of what process or organisational pathway is followed for someone at risk from self-neglect due to hoarding, the starting point must always be engagement with the individual. Positive outcomes are best achieved through person-centered practice that takes into account the unique experience of each individual balanced with our professional duties, our ethical framework and our safeguarding responsibilities.

5.3 When engaging with the adult all professionals should consider and check whether or not:

- They have the necessary information in a format they can understand

- The adult understands the options available and consequences of their choices
- They understand the reasons for mistrust, disengagement, refusal and their choices
- There is time to build a rapport over a period and develop a trusting relationship
- There are family members, advocates and other professionals able to support engagement with the adult
- There is an attorney or legally appointed representative, who, if so, must be consulted
- The plan for agreed actions or outcomes for a person who has fluctuating capacity was in place during a time in which they had capacity for that decision
- The adult can be assisted to engage and to attend meetings wherever possible

5.4 The family member or carer of an adult at risk should be engaged where the adult at risk has asked for that person or provided consent. Identifying who should be involved should be part of planning and decision making. Professionals should confirm who is willing and able to provide support and ensure that relevant duties under the Care Act for carers' assessments have been complied with.

Single Agency Management of Low-Risk outside of Safeguarding

5.5 Hoarding can sometimes be managed without referral to safeguarding adult procedures. Such cases could potentially be addressed via less formal routes such as engagement with the adult, supporting a person to address their personal concerns e.g. about letting go of treasured possessions or improving social skills and engagement with community activities, or access to health care and counselling.

5.6 Professional judgement is key to deciding whether a case should be escalated and/or whether there are any factors or issues that if changed, would increase concerns and raise a 'low-risk' case to a higher threshold. Professionals managing cases at a single agency level therefore need to continually review risk levels to determine what would warrant a referral into safeguarding adults. Professional judgement is needed to consider the level of risk, how risk is being managed, the adult's mental capacity and anyone else (including children) who may be affected.

6. Referrals under safeguarding adult's policy

6.1 Safeguarding referrals should detail concerns regarding the welfare of the person; the state of the property and the actual or likely effect on their health, their property, any children at the property and or concerns for animals or others at the property or in the vicinity.

6.2 Concerns with respect to children, and the potential for harm or neglect, should be referred to the respective Local Authority children's services.

6.3 Once underway, safeguarding adult's enquiries should provide the framework in which to:

- Identify the adult's wishes, views and beliefs and what outcome they wish to achieve
- Consider and if needed assess an adult's capacity and make best interest decisions
- Share appropriate multi-agency information to assess risk and formulate a risk management plan
- Establish what may be contributing or causing the behaviours and ways to address them or take preventative measures to reduce risk and reoccurrence
- Identify risks to others and how these may be addressed

6.4 Once hoarding is being managed within the safeguarding arena, decisions should be made as to who or which agency is best suited to undertake enquiries and engage with the adult at risk. The LA will retain responsibility for coordinating the response and assuring itself that risk has been managed and reduced appropriately before any case closure.

7. Brief Interventions under Section 42 Enquiries

7.1 Section 42 enquiries provide the opportunity to work with adults at risk to achieve the outcome they want, while addressing areas of risk through the safeguarding plan. Section 42 enquiries in relation to self-neglect through hoarding can include, but are not limited to:

- Any enquiry into abuse and neglect that may have contributed to or precipitated the self-neglecting behavior or hoarding
- Therapeutic responses, e.g. access to mental health, drug & alcohol services, bereavement counselling and cognitive behaviour therapies services
- Brief interventions, particularly those that work to enable changes in attitude or behavior and to handle underlying issues

7.2 The Making Safeguarding Personal toolkit has a range of options available and details can be found at the end of this guidance. In addition, Braye et al. (2005) suggested the following intervention options can be applied:

Theme	Examples
Being there	Maintaining contact; monitoring risk/capacity, spotting motivation
Practical input	Household equipment, repairs, benefits, 'life management'
Risk limitation	Safe drinking, fire safety, repairs
Health concerns	Doctors' appointments, hospital admissions
Care and support	Small beginnings to build trust
Cleaning / clearing	Proportionate to risk, with agreement, 'being with', attention to what follows
Networks	Family/ community, social connections, peer support
Therapeutic input	Replacing what is relinquished; psychotherapy/mental health services
Change of environment	Short term respite, a new start
Enforced action	Setting boundaries on risk to self & others

8. Adults Who Decline Intervention or Refuse Support

8.1 The most frequent concern raised by professionals when working with adults who may be self-neglecting through hoarding is the challenge of adults refusing to engage or accept services.

8.2 Self-neglect through hoarding needs to be understood from each individual's unique set of circumstances and experiences. There is no one model that explains hoarding and each case may be combination of physical, mental, social, personal and environmental factors. It is therefore always preferable to get to know the individual and their history in order to understand their behaviour and why they are unable or reluctant to address the problem or engage with and trust services and professionals.

Actions that may promote engagement in self-neglect cases are suggested by Braye et al. (2015) as:

Theme	Examples
Building rapport	Taking the time to get to know the person, refusing to be shocked
Moving from rapport to relationship	Avoiding kneejerk responses to self-neglect, talking through the interests, history and stories
Finding the right tone	Being honest while also being non-judgmental, separating the person from the behaviour
Going at the individual's pace	Moving slowly and not forcing things; continued involvement over time
Agreeing a plan	Making clear what is going to happen; a weekly visit might be the initial plan
Finding something that motivates the individual	Linking to interests (e.g. hoarding for environmental reasons, link into recycling initiatives)
Starting with practicalities	Providing small practical help at the outset may help build trust
Bartering	Linking practical help to another element of agreement – bargaining
Focusing on what can be agreed	Finding something to be the basis of the initial agreement, that can be built on later
Keeping company	Being available and spending time to build up trust
Straight talking	Being honest about potential consequences
Finding the right person	Working with someone who is well placed to get engagement
External levers	Recognising and working with the possibility of enforcement action

8.3 If an adult at risk refuses or declines an assessment, services or support, a risk assessment must be carried out to determine the level of seriousness of each identified risk. Any interventions must apply a 'Making Safeguarding Personal' or person-centred/enabling approach that as far as is possible, promote the adult's understanding of the risk and the options available for managing risk.

8.4 Appropriate information should be shared with relevant professionals who have a role in contributing to the plan to manage or monitor risk.

8.5 Where others are at risk, it may be necessary to take some actions without the consent of the individual displaying the hoarding behaviour. Where this may be the case legal advice should be sought when appropriate.

9. Proposal for a High-Risk Panel (HRP) / Vulnerable Adults Risk Management (VARM) or equivalent.

9.1 HRPs or equivalent, here to referred to as the 'panel', are multi-agency panel(s) to discuss, identify and document serious current risks in complex cases and provide a framework for adults experiencing or at risk of abuse or neglect who have capacity but who continue to make unwise and unsafe choices. Where an adult has mental capacity to understand both the problem and the consequences of refusing help, a referral to a panel could be made to look at alternative potential solutions or jointly agree the risks.

9.2 The panel's purpose is to evaluate risk, formulate plans, identify which agencies will be responsible for intervention and review action plans to evaluate effectiveness and monitor change and outcomes.

9.3 Panel(s) should only be convened in circumstances whereby the adult has mental capacity to make unwise decisions and choices about their life. However, their decision-making leaves them or others at significant risk.

9.4 The Panel should be used only in exceptional circumstances, not as a regular alternative to replace existing processes or substitute for engagement and partnership working with the adult at risk.

9.5 Panel processes should be used only where there are significant concerns from partners or the community and there is documented evidence that all other attempts at safeguarding or preventative interventions have failed.

10. Legal Options and Processes

10.1 Legal measures can be initiated by single agencies or via safeguarding adult services. In cases where adults lack capacity to make decisions or the adult has capacity, but the level of risk is high, legal measures can be considered under the safeguarding adults procedures. Legal steps can be used to compel an adult to remove risk, permit services access and in some instances to remove the adult from the risk. It should be remembered that legal intervention should be a 'last resort' and a balance struck between an individual's rights and the safety of others who may be adversely affected by the adult's hoarding behaviours.

10.2 In brief some of the legal options may include:

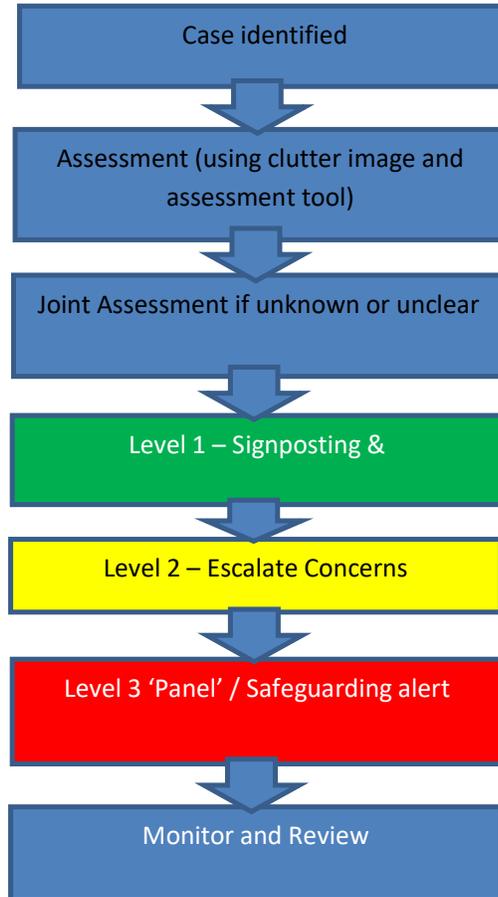

- Public Health Act 1936, Section 79: Power to require removal of noxious matter by occupier of premises
- Public Health Act 1936, Section 83: Cleansing of filthy or verminous premises
- Public Health Act 1936, Section 84: Cleansing or destruction of filthy or verminous articles
- Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949, Section 4: Power of LA to require action to prevent or treat rats and mice
- Environmental Protection Act 1990, Section 80: Dealing with statutory nuisances
- Mental Health Act 1983, Section 2 & 3: for health and safety and protection of others
- Mental Health Act 1983, Section 135: removal of person to place of safety for assessment to take place

10.3 There are additional powers through housing, such as the Town and Country Planning Act and the Housing Act 2004, in which orders for repairs or enforcement action for hazards exist in any building or land posing a risk.

10.4 It is important to recognise when we can/may act (and have the power to do so) and where we shall/must act (and have a duty to do so). First steps should always be to try to gain the consent of the person being affected, to engage with them and work with them to promote their acceptance of the services and support that is necessary to meet their needs.

11. Process for Clutter Image Rating Tool (CIRT)

The flow chart below sets out the process for use of the Clutter Image Rating Tool. If in doubt, please ask your team leader / manager for assistance.

Please use the clutter image rating to assess what level the adult's hoarding problem is at:

Images 1- 3 Level 1

Images 4- 6 Level 2

Images 7- 9 Level 3

Then refer to the clutter assessment tool to guide which details the appropriate action you should take. Record all actions undertaken in the agency's recording system, detailing conversations with other professionals, actions taken and action yet to be taken.

16. Guidance for Practitioners (from all agencies)

Hoarding Insight characteristics

16.1 Use this guide as a baseline to describe the client's attitude towards their hoarding. Provide additional information in your referrals and reports to enable a tailored approach that is relevant to you client.

Good or fair insight:

The client recognises that hoarding – related beliefs and behaviours (relating to difficulty discarding items, clutter or excessive acquisition) are problematic. The client recognises these behaviours in themselves.

Poor insight

The client is mostly convinced that hoarding – related beliefs and behaviours (relating to difficulty discarding items, clutter or excessive acquisition) are not problematic despite evidence to the contrary. The Client might recognise a storage problem but has little self – recognition or acceptance of their own hoarding behaviour.

Absent (delusional) insight

The Client is convinced that hoarding- related beliefs and behaviours (relating to difficulty discarding items, clutter or excessive acquisition) are not problematic despite evidence to the contrary. The Client is completely accepting of their living environment despite it being a hoard and possibly a risk to health.

Detached with assigned blame

The client has been away from their property for an extended period. The client has formed a detachment from the hoarded property and is now convinced a 3rd party is to blame for the condition of the property. For example, a burglary has taken place, squatters or other household members

17. Assessment Tool Guidelines

See Appendix 1 for guidance on questions which could be used during an assessment

1. Property structure services and garden area	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Assess the access to all entrances and exits for the property. (Note impact on any communal entrances & exits). Include access to roof space. • Can the occupant escape from all rooms in the event of a fire or other emergency? • Is there a clear plan of what to do in the event of a fire or other emergency and does everyone in the home know it? • Does the property have a working smoke alarm? • Carry out a cursory visual assessment of the condition of the services within the property e.g. plumbing, electrics, gas, air conditioning, heating; this will help inform your next course of action. • Are the services connected? • Assess the garden; size, access and condition.
2. 19. The Panel

19.1 The Panel will bring together a range of agencies / services with whom the individual is or may have previously been involved in order to provide an opportunity for multi-agency working on cases of self-neglect and hoarding.

19.2 The membership of the panel will be made up of representatives of partner agencies.

19.3 The panels would be providing a multi-agency approach to effect positive change for vulnerable adults as part of the safeguarding adult prevention agenda.

19.4 Each agency that brings information to the panel will be responsible for ensuring that they have the right to share information with the other agencies represented. To assist in this, there should be a standard protocol, whereby it is agreed

- a) What, if any, records other agencies will make of information brought to the panel, for example only those agencies with an agreed action will retain a record; and
- b) Each agency will sign up to confidentiality of the panel; agree not to share information gained at the panel, with the exception of permitting circumstances.

20. Advocacy and support

20.1 It is essential to ensure all efforts are made to ensure the person suspected of self-neglecting and or hoarding is consulted with and included in discussions, with concerns raised directly with them at the earliest opportunity.

20.2 The individual concerned should be invited to participate in the Panel and offer the necessary support to do so by the case holding agency. If the person's choice is not to attend the Panel, the case holding agency must feedback back any decision that is made to the person within a reasonable time period.

20.3 If there is concern that the person is in need of additional support to ensure they understand the concerns raised, the involvement of an appropriate advocate must be considered. Where the individual declines to participate or engage with agencies or provide access, information obtained from a range of other sources may facilitate access into the property, or to determining areas / levels of risk.

21. Employees

21.1 For employees dealing with cases of self-neglect and or hoarding this can be a stressful time. All agencies should have robust support mechanisms and policies in place, to ensure the health and safety of its employees. This should include practice supervision, peer support, lone working systems and where appropriate access to health and welfare advisory support services.

21.2 To enable employees to be effective in dealing with cases of self-neglect and hoarding, employees should also have access to a range of learning and development opportunities either offered by their own organisation, or by a multi-agency approach.

21.3 All organisations should raise the awareness and understanding of staff who work with people who self-neglect to offer flexible, person centred and creative approaches and are supported to nurture self-care.

Appendix 1 Guidance questions which could be used during an assessment

Listed below are examples of questions to ask where you are concerned about someone's safety in their own home, where you suspect a risk of self-neglect and hoarding? The information gained from these questions will inform a Hoarding Assessment and provide the information needed to alert other agencies. Most clients with a hoarding problem will be embarrassed about their surroundings so adapt the question to suit your assessment with the person.
